Would you look at that?

As the Victoria Street School students lined up in the school yard on the first day of school, there was one character who tried to jump the queue and get the best seat in the class - a neighbourhood cat. As principal Judy Tomlinson-Ross rushed after the feline intruder, Grade 2 students Caitlin Cook, Laura Kirkpatrick, Krista Patterson and Maddie Ferracuti delighted in the antics. More back to school photos on page 3.

High school's on despite strike threat

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

High school students were able to attend classes on the first day of school yesterday, but they couldn't go to football practice, drama club or participate in any other extra-curricular activity.

The area's 437 secondary school teachers, who have given their union an 89 per cent strike mandate, decided last week they would work through ongoing contract talks rather than take to picket lines — at least for now.

In the meantime, it appears all voluntary programs led by teachers outside regular school hours have been cancelled indefinitely, including after-school sports, drama and other activities.

I'd just like negotiations settled so that we're on solid ground. The teachers do still have a strike mandate ... but I am trying to remain as optimistic as possible.

With increased teaching time and less scheduled time to prepare for classes, most teachers say they no longer have time to organize extra-curricular programs or coach sports teams.

The teachers' union has also requested that teachers refrain from all voluntary activities during contract talks.

“We have instructed our members to undertake the contracted workload that the board has imposed on them,” said Peter Carroll, bargaining unit president for District 15 of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

Area teachers returned after the summer break to less scheduled daily preparation time and more time in the classroom in front of their students.

An increase in teaching time, as ordered by the provincial government's controversial Bill 160, has been the key stumbling block to negotiations between teachers and the board.

Bill 160, which sparked last fall's Ontario-wide teachers' strike, requires teachers to spend at least 1,250 minutes per week instructing students.

The Tillium Lakelands District School Board and the teachers' union had been trying to negotiate how to accommodate the increase in teaching

Scary sound supposed to make geese fly south

TO HUMANS IT MAY SOUND like a firecracker, but to the Canada geese, the shrill sound buzzing above Head Lake Park is supposed to lead them to believe that a predatory bird is overhead. Such a sound has been heard coming from the park recently as park manager Jim Elstone tries to get rid of the geese that have been defecating in such prodigious amounts. He has a licence to use what's called a "scare gun" to convince the geese that Haliburton is not a hospitable home.

To clarify a recent story about volunteers in the construction industry helping people in the Burnt River area recover from this past spring's flooding, it should be noted that the provincial funding is for the municipiality of Somerville to fix and upgrade its roads. Individual homeowners whose property was damaged by the flooding cannot apply for funding from the municipality or the province.

Further to that, property owners on Little Redstone Lake were likely surprised when they read the caption under last week's County Life photo of the McCombe family's inukshuk, placing it, and the McCombes, on Kennis Lake. Rest assured, the McCombes are still happily on Little Redstone.

Back to school:

This is the last September when students will be making their way to Victoria Street School in Haliburton. By this time next year, the students are scheduled to go to Stuart Baker Elementary School, which is being built next to the senior elementary school to replace the aging VSS. That wasn't foremost on most kids' minds on Tuesday, however. Clockwise from top left: Toya Campbell, Alyssa Loucks and Sierra Kletke watch kids getting off the bus to see if any of their friends have arrived; while his mom, Janet, talks to teacher Wilma Powers, new kindergarten student Ian Bottum looks as if he'd prefer to re-think this whole school idea; two boys watch the action from the fence; playing on the school yard is one of these girls' reasons for wanting to return; and Dave Chambers and his son Cameron share a happy moment before Cameron has to begin school life on his own.

High school make-over begins to take shape

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

Secondary students returning class today in Haliburton will scarcely be able to recognize their old high school.

Since classes ended for the summer break much of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School has been transformed in the first half of a $6-million makeover.

Just after they walk through the building's front entrance, students will get their first glimpse of the changes that will vastly improve their school over the coming months.

The administrative offices and the guidance department have switched sides of the hallway, allowing the administrative area to be expanded. The old office had little room to handle the heavy flow of students between periods, at the lunch break and before and after school. The guidance office now has a room for students and staff to hold group meetings and a computer area students can use to access information about colleges and universities.

A few doors down the hall the antiquated science labs have been gutted and turned into spacious classrooms.

Further on a brand new wing with five state-of-the-art labs — each specially designed for their subject of study — replaces the old science facilities.

And at the opposite end of the building is the giant brick shell of what promises to become the school's focal point.

Over the next two months crews will turn huge structure into a triple gymnasium to replace the school's existing two small gyms. A mezzanine overlooking the new gyms will house classrooms for health and phys ed, an office for phys ed department staff, a workout room and space for recreational games, such as ping pong and pool.

"This is going to be the hub of the school for students," said principal Gary Brohman.

The gymnasium complex, which Brohman called "second to none in the province," will also serve an important role after school hours for community groups and sports teams.

November 1 has been set as the completion date for the gyms to be ready for use.

"It's going to be a great facility for our students and also for community use. It's wonderful," said Brohman.

Once the triple gym is finished crews will start work turning one of the old gyms into a performing arts centre financed with more than $200,000 in funds raised by the community.

"With community partnership I see the theatre being used every day and every weekend," said Brohman. "It's going to be up to the players to see where it goes, but it has tremendous potential."

The school will solve its cafeteria overcrowding problem by building a larger facility in the other former gym. The new cafeteria will seat 300 students at a time, compared to the 100 who sit elbow to elbow in the existing one.

Crews will then turn the former cafeteria into a visual arts room, enabling the school to expand its program. HHSS has begun offering a Grade 12 visual arts course and may add the subject as an OAC credit next year.

Parry Sound-based Morgan Construction, which is also building Haliburton's new primary school, will likely be finished at the high school by the March break, said Brohman.

When construction is complete, the school will have enough classroom space that it shouldn't need any portables.

"Our demographics of the area show the school shouldn't go over 800 students. We're peaking right about now and then it should begin to level off," said Brohman.

When OAC (Grade 13) is eliminated next September, the school will also gain space in four classrooms that would have been used by OAC students.

Haliburton will have one of the top high schools in Ontario by the time its upgrade and expansion are finished, said Brohman.

"We always had the best venue. We always had the best campus. Now we're going to have one of the best facilities."

Brohman credited trustees and administrators with the former Haliburton County Board of Education for their foresight during the four years it took them to get the project approved.

With the many radical changes happening in education today, it likely would have been impossible to get a similar upgrade off the drawing board, he said.

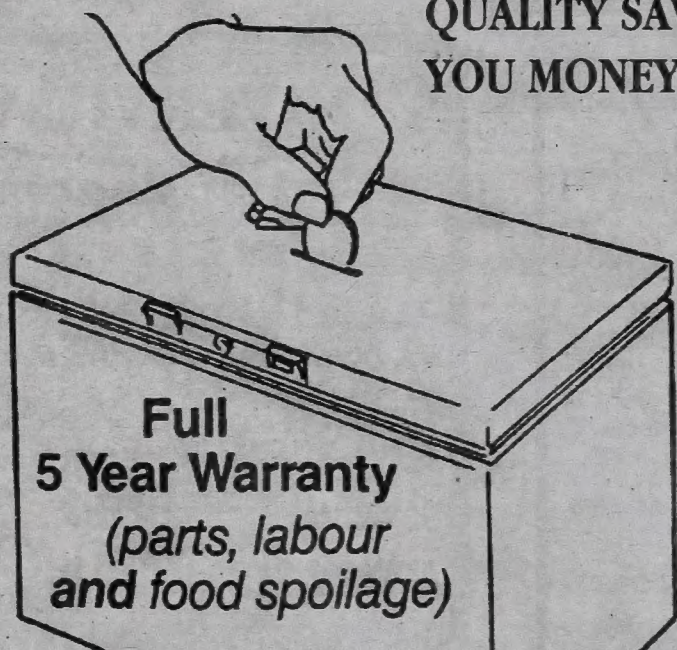

"Haliburton County got what it had to get for kids in this community and got it at the right time because tomorrow might be too late."

If people want to enjoy the Highlands' natural beauty, Drag Lake summer resident Dick Holland believes we've got to be prepared to protect that beauty instead of waiting for government to do it for us. Last Thursday morning, he was on the shores of Head Lake, picking up debris to help beautify the park, which he believes is such an asset to the village of Haliburton. He and his friends are also the ones who cleaned up the walking path along the Drag River to the dam, as well as Skyline Park, making sure that people could truly enjoy the view.

But last week, with the first day of classes just days away, the board put talking aside and exercised its power to make unilateral changes to the teachers' previous collective bargaining agreements.

High school teachers will now be required to provide "on average" an additional 22 minutes of student instruction per day.

The school day has not been lengthened to create the extra classroom time. Teachers' prep time, which they use to prepare lessons, mark work, deal with students one-on-one and carry out other tasks, has been cut by an equivalent number of minutes.

But because it doesn't make sense to teach an additional 22 minutes of a period and then hand the class over to another teacher — each period of the day is 70 minutes long — some teachers will have to spend more time in class than others.

Previously, high school teachers would teach three of four periods per day in each semester for a total of six courses in a year.

Now some will have to take on an additional course for one of the semesters.

The board maintains it was left no alternative but to force the change.

"We were funded by the province for 6.67 periods per teacher, but there's no such thing so some teachers will have six periods and others will have seven," said board chair Cheryl Murdoch.

Education director Evelyn Brown said high school principals have had a difficult time putting together timetables that try to share the increase in teaching time more fairly among their staff.

"We're trying to ensure that no one is teaching more than the average," she said.

But the teachers' union argues the board could have accommodated the mandated increase by recognizing duties teachers already carry out, rather than bumping up their instruction time.

On-call coverage, supervisory duties and home forms could all be counted toward the additional teaching time called for by the province, said Carroll.

"These are clearly professional duties that are carried out by the teachers. They involve teaching students," he said. "... We believe the definition of instructional time needs to be negotiated with the board."

A nearby school board struck such a deal with its teachers.

Though details of the agreement haven't been released, the Near North District School Board, an amalgamation of the former Nipissing and East and West Parry Sound boards, reportedly agreed to leave teaching time unchanged.

Carroll said the board's move to increase classroom instruction time for teachers is "clearly unacceptable."

"They have increased the workload of teachers. For some teachers that workload will increase dramatically ... Obviously the membership is not very happy."

Teachers across the board and the union negotiating team are to meet late this week to discuss "future action" in response to the board's decision, said Carroll.

"This move by the board leaves us little room to manoeuvre," he said in a news release.

Negotiation dates have been set with the board on Sept. 11, Sept. 16 and Sept. 17.

Brown said she's hopeful the board will be able to reach an agreement with high school teachers quickly.

"I'd just like it to get settled so that we're on solid ground. The teachers do still have a strike mandate ... but I am trying to remain as optimistic as possible."

Real estate picture brightens gradually

Summer sales on par with last year, but overall movement increases

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

As the province's overall economic picture continues to look better, realtors and property owners in the Highlands are benefitting from a steadily improving real estate market.

Not only is the number of sales in the county climbing gradually, but also selling prices are rising, says the Haliburton District Real Estate Board.

While this summer's real estate sales are on par with last year's — which were higher than the summer before — sales for the first eight months of the year were up over the same time frame in 1997.

"It's not a large increase, but it's a healthy increase," said Century 21 broker Derrell Stamp, president of the local real estate board.

Total sales to date this year for the 13 real estate offices in the county that belong to the board are nearly $36.6-million, Stamp said.

That represents an increase in dollars of seven per cent over last year and a three per cent increase in the number of overall properties sold, including cottages, homes and vacant lots.

Home and cottage owners are also getting more for than their properties.

The average selling price for residential properties sold through the real estate board's multiple-listing service is up by 9.6 per cent, while cottage prices have grown four per cent.

Summer real estate sales began and ended slower than last year, but were very strong in July to help realtors match last summer's sales.

This summer real estate board members sold 58 properties in June, 98 in July and 58 in August for a total of 214. The previous summer there were 73 sales in June, 66 in July and 74 in August, adding up to 213 total.

Realtors say they haven't identified any definite buying trends, but are encouraged by improved sales and growing interest from prospective buyers.

"There's been a lot of people around and a lot of inquiries, though I'm not certain of the sincerity of all the inquiries. But maybe it's a sign future sales will be stronger," said broker Anthony vanLieshout, of Royal LePage vanLieshout Realty Ltd.

As is typical during the summer,

VanLieshout said his office has been selling more cottages than full-time residences.

"There's been a lot of interest in the upper-range properties. We've sold a number in the $300,000-plus range."

Lynn Craigmyle, an associate broker and manager at Haliburton's Bowes & Cocks, also said high-end properties are moving well.

"The whole market has been very active. That covers the whole spectrum from lower-end cottages in the $40,000 to $50,000 range right up to properties in the $400,000 range."

Though real estate sales have been growing steadily since 1996, they are still far from where they were during the boom in the late 1980s.

"I don't think we'll see those figures for a long time," said Stamp. "I don't think it was healthy for the market anyway. There was a lot of speculation and there was a huge demand for property. I don't think it was realistic."

Word that the county's two healthcare expansion projects will finally get underway this month is great news that should draw more seasonal and full-time residents to the area, say realtors.

"I think it does encourage the early retirees who are looking at retiring in the county for the next 20 years. It's a big bonus for Haliburton County," said Stamp.

People who may have been drawn to buy properties in neighbouring areas with access to larger hospitals will be able to widen their property search to the Highlands, he said.

VanLieshout predicted the real estate market will begin to feel the impact of the healthcare projects "as soon as the shovels go in the ground."

Loaves and fishes

THE AMAZING THING ABOUT WILBERFORCE is that such a small town has managed to build so much. With a population of roughly 250 souls, it's pulled together enough resources to build an arena, a community centre, curling rink and Legion hall. What other community of a similar size has been able to accomplish so much?

Not content to let it rest there, the community's next project is a mural to beautify the main intersection in the village. (Okay, so it's the only intersection, really.) Artist Allen Hilgendorf has been hired to capture one of the village's special moments in history: the arrival of soldiers returning from World War II. Considering Hilgendorf's rather substantial talent for detailed and realistic murals, the $3,000 price is a true bargain; best to grab the opportunity before Hilgendorf's talents price him out of the community's market. Yet, however much value the village is getting for its money, $3,000 is still a large amount for such a small place to raise.

During a visit to Wilberforce on Friday, organizer Mary Barker's enthusiasm made it easier to understand why and how the money is already in the bank. Deeply touched by how quickly and generously people responded, she points to all the individual names filling rows upon rows of squares on a piece of bristol board. Each square represents a $10 donation and each square has a story.

Six of those squares represent a sort of "loaves and fishes" tale. In a roundabout way, the committee received a $6 donation, not quite enough to purchase a square. Instead, the $6 was given to Ida Holmes (she of Monmouth Agricultural Fair prize winning fame for her multiple "domestic science" entries). Mrs. Holmes bought $6 worth of sugar and butter (chipping in some of her own money, no doubt) and went home to make fudge. The fudge, sold in $1 goodie bags, raised $60 for the project. A $6 contribution miraculously transforms itself into something worth $60. That's the Wilberforce magic.

Credit should also be given to the community for its choice of theme for the mural. In honouring its World War II veterans, the community is keeping alive the men's unselfishness and willingness to give of themselves for the betterment of others, seen on a global scale. One of those veterans was the late Reg Schofield, who suffered terribly in a Japanese Prisoner of War camp after the disastrous fall of Hong Kong. Coming from one of the community's pioneering families - his uncle, A.J. Schofield founded Ontario's first Red Cross Outpost Hospital, now a museum in Wilberforce - young Reg probably saw the war as a way to see the world and be part of the glory that is England. He took his naivety and his optimism with him. Upon his return, his spirit recovered faster than his body, helping propel him back into the life of his beloved home town.

He will be one of the soldiers portrayed coming home on the train and being greeted by the school children and friends on the platform. To the casual passerby, the scene will be pretty and quaint; to those who knew Reg and the other soldiers from the area, it will be a poignant reminder that Wilberforce may be small, but it has definitely earned its place on the world map.

Love of Lochlin unites community

To the Editor:

Love of community, I believe, lives in each of us. What is unique is how we each express it as an individual.

For many people it is helping their neighbours, for others it is organizing local sports teams or for some it may be volunteering their time to a much needed community cause.

This past Sunday, the Lochlin Park and Community Centre sponsored a "Community Fun Day". As a board member it was a pleasure to see our local community come together to enjoy each other and the grounds of the Community Centre.

Children and adults alike, enjoyed old-fashioned games, prizes, face-painting, music, a barbecue and corn that was donated by the Lochlin General Store and Jack Hill.

As covered in the most recent issue of the Echo, a dedication of our new sign took place in honour of Celia Brown. Mrs. Brown was the only teacher at the school and recently donated her sketch of the Community Centre for the centerpiece of the sign. Jon Hill of County Sign and Display then created the beautiful sign that lets people know who we are. Thank you, Celia and Jon!

At this dedication, Mrs. Brown was presented with her sketch in a frame that she can keep as a remembrance of the occasion. Betty Hicks did a wonderful job in her words of dedication. However, the truly special keepsakes of the day came in the glowing comments given Mrs. Brown by her former students who attended. One gentleman articulately praised her for the way Mrs. Brown had inspired him to learn.

On behalf of the board of the Community Centre I would like to thank everyone who came out to support this event. It reinforces to me the value of community spirit and that our community is a special place to live.

I would especially like to thank Nancy Hogan (Dugan) for her sincere appreciation of the day and all of the volunteers who helped to make it a "Fun Day in Lochlin."

Bonnie Roe,
on behalf of the Lochlin Park
and Community Centre

P.S. Any ideas for future events are always welcome!

Haliburton must clean up its act

To the Editor:

Re: "Garbage-strewn streets...", September 1, 1998 by Jim Ellis.

Jim Ellis is right! The Cranberry Cottage store is a wonderful example for other Haliburton shopkeepers to follow. It would be nice to see more stores in this town follow suit. But don't expect much. Most store owners in town can't even shovel the snow from the sidewalk! And we wonder why people shop in Lindsay!

A wild ride

THE TURBULENT 20TH CENTURY has been especially hard on 'isms' and their followers. Over the past hundred years, a lot of the world's sacred cows have, before our very eyes, morphed into...well, turkeys.

Theories of racial and gender superiority, accepted by many Canadians not so long ago, have proven to be a lot of bull, their udderly discredited adherents now consisting mainly of assorted groups of losers inhabiting the outer fringes of society. Materialism has, alas, proven itself to be just another big cowpie on the road to true happiness. The theory that the world will be OK if we all have enough stuff has been the foundation of our consumer society. The problem is, if this be true, then why are the rich so messed up?

As for communism, Comrade Clarabelle's spectacular rise and equally precipitous fall is one of the distinguishing features of this century. Nourished on the blood of her acolytes, the ungrateful calf eventually grew to stunning proportions but gave only miniscule amounts of milk, most of it toxic, and recently had to be put out to pasture.

perspectives

Bessy Big Biz, now undisputed moostress of the dairy, has become downright cannibalistic, gobbling up fellow bovines at an alarming rate. Bloated and in obvious discomfort, her stomach rumbling ominously, she may explode at any moment.

Which leaves nationalism.

Patriot Patsy, one of Bessy's recent victims, may be quite dead and starting to putrify, but her keepers insist she's just doing fine and, with a bit of propping up, will produce milk for many years to come.

All cuddling aside, the bitter truth is that in spite of the reassurances of our politicians to the contrary, Canada is no longer a sovereign country, and in fact has not been so for many years. We used to worry mainly about that sleeping elephant to the south. Now, however, tightly integrated into the world economy, we are at the mercy of plummeting rubles, sinking yen and other assorted global hiccups. With less than 5% of the world economy, Canada is a small cog in a big machine and will spin at a speed decreed by others.

The pundits say that our economic fundamentals are sound. Well, what is fundamental to our economy? Imports and exports of course, which in turn depend on the value of the Canadian dollar and the economies of our trading partners. The Canadian stock market gets broadsided by overseas investors, consumers lose confidence as the value of their investments shrink and they no longer buy houses, cars and other big ticket items. In spite of low interest rates and a shrinking national debt, recession looms. Government is powerless to stop the slide.

Unfortunately, although our economy is now demonstrably global, there are few global institutions that have at heart the interests of individual nations, let alone their lowly citizens. Currency traders, along with their large multinational allies, are largely unaccountable to anyone. In spite of our best efforts, our economic future is very uncertain, so hang on to your pocketbooks folks, we could be in for a wild ride.

Actifest '98 (The Senior Games)

Went to the Actifest the other day,

Had to get up early, it was a long way away;

All the way to Windsor, down by the U.S.,

Treated us real nice for we were their guests.

Stayed at the university, slept in a dorm

Facilities across the hall, it was the "norm".

Bussed off to breakfast, what a treat

You could fill up with anything you cared to eat.

Then off to the track, for walking was my game

Seven and a half laps around, every lap the same.

One lap just for fun with a trumpet serenade

T.V. camera on us to start the big parade.

Trod my way around, came in almost last,

Surprised to find out I was walking too fast.

Then 'twas the same routine the very next day

This time I trod too slow or so they say.

Didn't win a medal, didn't get a plaque

I'm sure there must be something very wrong with that track!

But I had a great time, an "experience" you'd say

And all you seniors should get in the games, a win would make your day.

And now I've got to get my act together, get it down pat

So I can go the next time to wherever Actifest's at.

Apprenticeship supports youth

AS OUR ECONOMY recovers, it is important that we help our young people get into the job market.

In many cases, there are good jobs available that pay good wages. The trick is making sure our young people have the right training for those jobs.

Our government is trying to help. Education Minister Dave Johnson announced plans to reform Ontario's apprenticeship training system so young people will get training that is better suited to industry's actual needs.

The forms are long overdue. The province's legislation affecting apprenticeship hasn't been overhauled since 1964. In 1998, some 14.5 per cent of Ontario's young people are unemployed, while some employers are desperate to hire skilled workers.

Chris Hodgson

queen's park

"Our young people have to know what opportunities are out there," Johnson said during his announcement at Eurospec, an auto-parts manufacturer in Newmarket that is training 20 apprentices. "They need to know that our apprenticeship system will prepare them for real jobs in Ontario's expanding economy."

In fact, we hope these reforms will double the number of people in apprenticeship programs.

Apprenticeship training will be reformed by:

- giving industry a stronger role
- eliminating unnecessary government regulation
- introducing a new funding strategy to ensure apprentices can access quality training.

We will be working with industry, educators and trainers to expand the opportunities for high school students to work toward an apprenticeship while they're completing high school. While there are some proposed tuition fees for the training, the education ministry is working on financial assistance programs to help students who need it.

The Kinmount Fair

Once again, the perfect way to say so long to summer was by enjoying it down to the very last day at the Kinmount Fair. Along with the midway, pioneer display and steam engine demonstrations, there were agricultural competitions which drew people from across the province. Clockwise from top left: Two girls enjoy being spun around on a midway ride; younger children enjoyed the dragon rollercoaster; Gordon Mark of Cameron fires up his 1917 Waterloo steam engine; a young driver discovers the thrill; Nancy Mitchell of Pepperlaw gives her Hereford bull a wash; Andie Shortt of Ashton worries about her Highlands cow's behaviour; and this young boy was one of the youngest participants a rider gives a pep talk to her horse before the judge comes by; Frank Stanfield sends a telegraph to the other end of the building as part of the Kinmount Pioneer Society's fascinating display of memorabilia from the area; another young rider waits her turn; and old cars were a popular part of the parade

OPP recruits for new cadet program to free up officers for other duties

The Ontario Provincial Police Uniform Recruitment Section is now accepting applications to the newly announced OPP Cadet program.

The OPP Cadet Program will hire and train 120 cadets during the 16-month program to assist in tasks designed to support front line police officers. Successful applicants will be recruited from and then return to work in their own communities. A total of 20 cadets will be assigned to perform operational support duties in each of the OPP's six regions.

"The cadets will help free up officers from non-operational duties, and let them get back on the street. This program is part of the government's $150-million five-year investment to make Ontario's communities safer," says Solicitor General Bob Runciman.

Applications are being accepted until Friday, October 2, 1998. For further information about applying to the OPP Cadet program, please contact your local OPP detachment, or the OPP Uniform Recruitment Section in Orillia, at (705) 329-6660, or visit the Uniform Recruitment Section website at:

Minden mural project mushes on with painting of sled dog team

■ Artist Gailon Valleau will soon begin village's second mural

Minden

Last spring, Gailon Valleau brightened part of Haliburton's main street by painting the peaceful landscaping in front of the old barn. It's the one that seems so pastoral, despite featuring a moose and a rock-cut.

This month, Valleau hopes to brighten Minden's Main Street with a mural. It will show a team of six dogs pulling a sleigh out of the snowy wilderness. They will be about 25 feet above the street, up on the arch of the building next to the IDA. They will look ready to compete in Minden's annual sled dog races.

The dogs will be Minden's second mural. The first, a 60-foot long landscape that tells the story of the Gull River, has just been completed by John Lennard on the Times building. Both were commissioned by a volunteer group who hope to turn Minden's downtown into an outdoor art gallery.

Because the new mural will be so high, Valleau will paint it across the street on the vacant lot between the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and the Norland Trading Post. It will be hoisted into place after it is completed, early in October.

For Valleau, the dogs will be mural number five. Her first, done three years ago, is on the Eagle Lake Store and was commissioned by the Rhubarb Festival. The 1950s car at the gas pump in Boomer's Cafe, also is hers. So is the SkyDome, upstairs at McKeck's. She also did a two storey English garden in a friend's house.

Raised in old-town Toronto in an artistic family, Valleau came to the Highlands 13 years ago, having had "enough of the city."

For the past three years, Valleau has owned her own home in Donald. Her aim is to renovate it into a studio, including an area for her first love, sculpting. Her main aim is to have that house on the Studio Tour some day.

Location of Minden's new mural will be beneath the peak above Apparitions, an arts and crafts store featuring native work. The building was built three years ago by pharmacists Paul and Janet Heffer. Right from the beginning, Paul thought the area beneath the peak called for something. He rejected a name, thinking it was "too small town." The sled dog races start almost in front of his store each January, when there is enough snow, so his mind turned so solidly in that direction that he had a sketch for a mural prepared.

When Minden's volunteer mural committee formed last spring and demonstrated their ability to produce the outstanding historic landscape on the Times' wall, Heffer approached them with the suggestion for the mural that Valleau is about to start.

ARTIST'S WORK:

This is an example of one of the murals by painter Allen Hilgendorf, who's been hired to do the Wilberforce mural. A former mill worker at Martin Lumber, he now devotes himself to his art, which has become very popular in towns throughout the province.

MEMORIAL MURAL: Overwhelmed by the level of community support, Wilberforce's Mary Barker, at left, holds up the notice board inviting people to "buy a square" of the mural that will be painted on the side of the Monmouth Fire Hall, in the background. The mural, by Allen Hilgendorf, will cost $3,000. This money was raised by selling the $10 squares. The Wilberforce mural will honour such veterans as the late Reg Schofield, who spent much of World War II in a Japanese Prisoner of War camp following the fall of Hong Kong. When he returned home to Wilberforce, local schoolchildren were given the afternoon off so they could welcome him at the train station, waving Union Jacks they had made themselves. Another photo from the era shows three little girls waiting on the station platform for the returning soldiers to arrive, and this image will also be incorporated in the mural, to be called "Johnny Comes Marching Home". The train station was about 20 feet from where the fire hall is today.

TIMBER!

■ In this excerpt from her book about area lumber baron Mossom Boyd, Grace Barker recounts the tale of what may perhaps be the first visit by tourists to the Highlands. This photo from the book at right shows men in Haliburton County cutting the large pines which fueled Boyd's empire – and the Canadian economy

Editor's Note: Grace Barker, a retired librarian from the Fenelon Falls/Bobcaygeon area with a lively interest in history, has written a book about Mossom Boyd, one of this area's first "lumber barons." The following is an excerpt from her chapter entitled "Expansion North", outlining Boyd's significant contribution to the settlement of Haliburton county. The self-published book is available in local book stores and at the Haliburton Highlands Museum in Haliburton.

by Grace Barker
Author
Timber Empire

IN SEPTEMBER 1869, Mossom Boyd received word that a party of officials from the English land company would be arriving from England to visit the land they had purchased.

Mr. Kennaway (who had succeeded Thomas Chandler Haliburton as chairman of the board) and his wife, accompanied by Mr. Gurney, a director on the board and his sister, would be accepting the invitation Boyd had proffered to stay as guests at the Big House in Bobcaygeon, and to visit the land they had purchased in the Haliburton district. Also in the party were Blomfield and a lawyer named Crooks from Peterborough representing the English land company.

On September 13, 1869, this rather large party started very early in the morning to make their way over the rutty Bobcaygeon Road to Minden. After lunching at 'Buck's Hotel' in Minden, they travelled over the portage trail from Minden to the foot of Lake Kashagawigamog which was the established water-route to the village of Haliburton.

A small steamboat named the "Watsell" had been operating on the lake since 1866. By all accounts it was not much of a steamer, but was a satisfactory alternative to rowing fourteen miles against the current to Haliburton. A wharf had been built at the bottom of Lake Kashagawigamog and the boat had been used frequently to tow supplies up to the village.

Young "Charlie-boy" Stewart, the first editor of the Bobcaygeon Independent, mentioned "the steamboat, of three tons burden, registered at the Town Pump as A1 cooper-bottomed, is warranted to go at the rate of three miles an hour in a fair wind."

G.S. Thompson, a long-time

Boyd employee who had hoisted many a cargo aboard the "Watsell" found it "difficult to describe her, she had to be seen as well as heard, for the noise she made while in motion could be heard for miles, and the old-timers vowed vengeance on her for the infernal noise she made frightened all the moose, bears and wolves and other large game out of the country, nor has any fish been caught in these waters since."

Unfortunately, the little steamer was not running the day Boyd arrived with the English party. It seems that the operator had the misfortune to have his hand shot off, or nearly so, and thus was not available to make the run. The trip up to Haliburton was completed in a large row boat.

When the party arrived in Haliburton they were welcomed by the Stewart family for the weekend. The village of Haliburton was receiving its first tourists! The morning the English visitors left Haliburton for their return trip to Bobcaygeon a light snow was falling.

No records have been found that mention the reaction of these English visitors to the beauty of an autumn day in the Highlands of Haliburton, with the deciduous trees flaunting their colours against a backdrop of pine and spruce. Mr. Kennaway did write later to Mossom Boyd indicating that he would like to return but his wife could not be persuaded to make another ocean voyage. None of the party ever returned to Canada.

WeeCare changes location of after-school program

■ Declining enrollment due to junior kindergarten prompts the move to its own site

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The introduction of junior kindergarten in Haliburton has prompted WeeCare to make changes to some of its services for children and families.

The Haliburton childcare centre's after-school program has been switched from J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School to its own facility on Hwy 121 just west of the village.

"If we're going to offer this service, it's the only economical way to do it," says WeeCare's supervisor, Marie Hodgson.

With the introduction of junior kindergarten across the new school board, enrollment at WeeCare has declined, freeing up one of the rooms at the centre. Instead of paying the minimal charge of offering an after-school program at JDHES and having to have an additional staff person on duty to comply with school rules, Hodgson says WeeCare is able to offer the same service more efficiently on its own site.

Its worker per child ratio for the after-school program is 1:15. At JDHES, the school required WeeCare to hire a second staff person, decreasing the ratio substantially. By having the service at WeeCare, which now also has sufficient space to dedicate one room to the program, and limiting enrollment to 15, WeeCare can retain the 1:15 ratio.

The program is available for children aged four to 12 and it's already full.

Parents have the responsibility of arranging to have the school bus drop their children off at the centre after school.

School board receives restructuring funding

The Trillium Lakelands District School Board has received $4.2-million to help offset restructuring costs and implement new systems and policies.

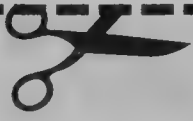

The Ministry of Education gave the board the money to cover such things as severance/training costs, development of a financial, human resources and student information systems; administrative costs; student transportation; video conferencing; wide area network construction; unified collective bargaining; and the development of administrative policies and procedures.

Many of these initiatives are required following the provincial decision to amalgamate the Muskoka, Victoria and Haliburton school boards.

"This funding also reflects the costs identified by the board to implement new information systems and to improve efficiencies and reduce administration costs," says board chairperson Cheryl Murdoch.

"It should be noted that the Minister has indicated that further grants for telecommunication costs may be available," adds Al Ingram, superintendent of finance.

Trillium Lakelands' request for additional funding was one of 900 received by the province, which had promised to allocate $385-million to the costs of restructuring. The local board had asked for $9.5-million and was granted half that amount.

have her problems, but she also has her strengths. She loves writing and drawing, especially if her drawings have something to do with fashion. She's meticulous in her dress. One day, her goal is to be a pioneer with the Jehovah's Witnesses since she loves going door to door talking with people.

But how did Bonnie Buxton and Brian Philcox happen to be sitting in the Woodward's home in Wilberforce, talking about FAE?

On their own, each family learned about a chat group on the internet called Faslink. Three hundred people with FAE children "talk" daily on their computers, exchanging anecdotal stories about children's behaviour and then sharing information on how to deal with it. During one of these chats, Buxton mentioned she was coming up to her cottage on Deer Lake, south of Highland Grove, and "boom", the two families realized they were more than just virtual neighbours, on weekends at least.

For both families, learning that there is a reason for their children's behaviour has been an incredible release.

"It's much easier once you know this person is not maliciously evil, she's a brain damaged child," says Philcox, adding that the FAE diagnosis for Colette raises a fascinating moral question: "if you don't understand what you've done, are you guilty?"

"It's not these kids' fault - they're victims," says Mr. Woodward.

But understanding FAE and its manifestations are not the same as being able to cure it, or even change the behaviour.

"You have to forget their weaknesses because you're never going to fix them," Buxton says. "You have to concentrate on their strengths."

"You have to lower your expectations," adds Mrs. Woodward, "because when you expect too much from them, you're setting them up for a fall."

"For some it's a life sentence but there are some of them you can help a lot," her husband says. Although damage done during pregnancy can't be undone, he says there's a natural brain spurt during adolescence and if a teenager can avoid drinking or doing drugs at this time, "they can gain back some of the loss."

Today, Colette is on welfare, living with a fellow squeegee kid who may also have FAE. Ironically, Colette, the girl who could not differentiate between good and bad when it came to her own behaviour, is starting to get mad when her telephone is disconnected because the money she gave her boyfriend to pay the bill was spent on alcohol instead. As well, her old neighbourhood vet, who has known her since she was a child, is giving her a chance to work at his clinic, cleaning cages and using her fearlessness to help him with the animals. It's a start.

Looking back over all the terrible times they've been through, Bonnie Buxton and Brian Philcox are asked why they never gave up on Colette.

"I have to admit," Philcox says, "there were many occasions when I said 'This is it, I'm not going to let her break my heart again,' but that was before the FAE diagnosis."

"The grief was terrible, knowing your kid was living on the streets," says Buxton, a screenwriter and freelance journalist who recently outlined their travails in an moving essay in Elm Street magazine. (The magazine says it has never received so many letters and requests stemming from a single article before.)

Just as the Woodward's got their strength from faith, the Philcoxes got it from each other, including Cleo. Colette may have been depleting their emotional reservoir, always taking, never giving, "but at least we were getting what we needed from each other," Buxton says. "Brian has what he calls 'epigrins' and he came up with one in the car on our way up: Our greatest renewable resource is love. Whenever you think there's nothing left, there it is like a spring, coming up again."

Me, is who I am

by JENNIFER WOODWARD

Fighting to see who I am, getting up each day knowing I'm not me, but someone I've learned to hate, someone my Mother made me.

I have the power to change, but don't know how, someone has taken away the plans for me, has diluted, has put in, and taken out, they forgot the antidote, thrown it away, made me something I'm not.

But somewhere, and somehow, someone saw me, care for me, loved me, and maybe, I'm still me, just different. Because someone loves me still.

If you think your child might suffer from FAE, the Philcoxes and Woodward's suggest you get in touch with the Canadian Centre for Substance Abuse's hotline even before you seek a medical diagnosis. It can be reached, toll-free, at 1-800-559-4514.

Benjamin McNaul is off to Queen's University in Kingston, to study science. Jodie Sobko is off to University of Waterloo to study in the Honours Science program. Good luck to you both.

I stopped by to see Claire Brooks at Lutterworth Pines, Minden, on Saturday, and she suggested lunch at the Minden Legion. So off we went to Branch 636. We had a delicious roast beef on a kaiser, potato salad, lettuce, tomato and coffee for $4.25. The Minden Legion serves a hot meal every day at noon. While we were there, they had a draw on a number of items. Prizes were: A lovely painting by Gord Wood of Brantford; second prize - a painted lamp, won by Cliff Green of Minden; third prize - a carved loon was won by Betty Aupers of Norland; fourth prize - an afghan, won by Jim Bradley of Minden; fifth prize - a crock pot, won by Brenda Roe of Toronto; sixth prize - a decorative dish was won by Lois Adamson of Minden; seventh prize - a quartz watch was won by J. Chillman of Minden.

Earl Winterburn was taken to Oshawa General Hospital on Saturday night, and has been very ill. They had been moving into the building vacated by Ray McMurray. Sadly, their little dog, on a leash, and held by Janet Savage, was attacked by two other dogs, and savagely killed. The little dog, owned by their late son, Rob, was dearly treasured and mourned greatly.

Truffles has moved: The little shop on main street is now located at the owner's home on Albert Street, the second house west of the post office. Lorraine Hodgson will still have lots of treasures to choose from, so just drop by the shop on Albert Street.

Hubby Grant and son-in-law Clint, were thrilled to see, and inspect, the famous Stanley Cup at the horse training centre owned by Trish, north of Fowlers Corners about three or four miles. The cup was on display Saturday, August 29.

Don Young is happy to be back home, was released from hospital on Tuesday, September 1.

On August 15 Bernie Nicholls took his father George, and brothers Erin and David, on a fishing trip for six days. The sight of grizzlies made the trip even more memorable.

Here at home, we've had the pleasure of our son Andy's company over two weeks with his fiancé, Kim Kirkpatrick, of Port Alberni, B.C.

On September 2 a few of the former St. Andrew's congregation met to reminisce over the church's earlier days. We didn't begin to complete the record of names and events of the thirties - fifties, so on October 7 we will gather here again at Elva Cooper's home to continue. Please come and help us fill in the details of long ago and of not so long ago.

Congratulations to Tanya Sisson on being part of the winning girls' soccer team in the Lindsay Women's Recreational Soccer League.

Thanks to those who phoned in news this time!

SOME TRANSPORTATION ASSISTANCE:

To help people make their way to the VON Adult Day Centre at Echo Hills Legion Apartments in Haliburton, the centre recently held its first fundraising raffle. Taking part in making the draw were centre participants Frank Sckrapnick, Orval Johnston, Bill Mighton and Lila Mills, along with staff member Dianne Greaves.

Wonderful summer going, but beautiful fall awaits

With Labour Day behind us we are forced into thinking that we must be prepared for a change. We are lulled into complacency by the long, warm, sunny days of summer and it always seems that we are plunged into the reality, that we live in a country that has a long, cold season. The first day of fall comes on September 21.

However, we can and probably will have weeks of bright, sunny weather. September can and probably will be the loveliest month of the year, with sunny days and chilly nights and Mother Nature painting the landscape in her beautiful robes of scarlet, gold and many shades thereof. So, if summer has deserted us we still have lots of beauty to look forward to.

There will be a Community Policing County meeting on Wednesday, September 16 at 7:30 p.m. held at the Dorset Recreation Centre.

The Dorset Seniors Club held its first regular meeting on Wednesday, September 2. There was a good turn-out. A delicious potluck supper was enjoyed. Then there was a general business meeting, the newly elected executive members were introduced: President Janeen Byman, 1st Vice Ursula Bryant, 2nd Vice Chris Clarke, Secretary Marlene Clarke, Treasurer Marg Mueller, Asst. Treasurer Alma Rennie. Reports were given, business matters attended to and plans for the future were discussed. After the meeting close, the cards came out and the members enjoyed the rest of the evening, playing their favourite card game.

There will be a Community Kitchen meeting in the Dorset Recreation Centre twice a month. If you are interested in cooking in bulk with a group - please join us! Planning meeting at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, September 18 at 10:00 a.m. Sounds interesting, why not come to the planning meeting and see what it's all about.

The Bell Telephone Company advocates that when you make a telephone call you allow the phone to ring six times. If you let it ring only four times and hang up, you allow the person you just called, to come from the bathroom, or from outside if they had just stepped out, to pick up the phone to the dial tone. I know that many people have a phone that gives them the number that called, but many don't. Some say, "I didn't want to disturb you by letting it ring." Unfortunately, it's the first ring that disturbs if you are going to be disturbed. I think Bell's suggestion is best. A minor matter, but something to think about.

H.H. If there is a threat of frost and you don't want to cover your tomatoes, gather them in a pail or basket and place them in a cool, dark spot. They will ripen gradually and you will have ripe tomatoes for some time.

Lake levels drop more than average

A considerable loss occurred from the reserve lake in Haliburton over the week of August 23 with their decline of about 4.5% to 51.5% average. This was due primarily to the dry conditions, since near minimum flow was being run to the Kawartha Lakes and the canal system.

In 1997 the levels were only about 2.5% higher at this date than now, because of some very dry conditions that occurred then, too.

The rain early last week had a greater effect on the Kawarthas than in Haliburton. It raised Rice Lake and several others beyond their proper full level so some surplus became available. An increase to the Otonabee and Trent Rivers was made to reduce the surplus.

Lake Simcoe-Couchiching is holding up well, having received considerable rain.
